Jetsetter, the first D4 39m superyacht, having now been under construction for just over a year, is now closing in on completion under the management of Dynamiq Yachts.

The yacht has been designed in Monaco, engineered in Holland and constructed in Italy at the NCA shipyard. London based design studio Bannenberg & Rowell are responsible for her interior styling.

The D4 range was built as a fast family cruiser just below 40m, using a platform that designed with a shallow draught of only 1.7m.

Technical director, Rob Williamson comments:

“ By the end of February, the hull fairing was finished and primed, ready for final top coats. The superstructure and deck fairing was 90 per cent finished on the main deck level and the sun deck fairing was in process ”

“ The engine room has all main machinery installed, insulation in place, the sub-floor frame is fitted, all equipment trays are in place and the piping is 95 per cent complete. In the interior the piping, cable routing, insulation and rough interior construction is finished on the lower deck level and this deck is ready for final furniture fit-out which will commence in March ”

Jetsetter is scheduled for delivery in September 2016 and listed for sale at €14.2 million.
