The Hotcars staff love a good muscle car, jacked up pickup, homebrew racer and of course any and every supercar known to man. We also love anything that goes fast whether on 4 wheels, 2 wheels ... or even no wheels at all! And this latest creation, that unfortunately missed its grand entrance on the world stage due to the coronavirus pandemic, is a superyacht that was based on a - you guessed it - supercar.

The Dynamiq GTM 90 was developed in cooperation with Klassen, the exclusive car tuner from Germany, who brought their considerable design and manufacturing know how to bear on the project. Not only is it a great looking boat but it's fast and sporty with an all-aluminum construction. Let's take a look at this one of a kind superyacht and see if it's worthy of the name.

Supercar Inspired Design, Luxury

According to Dynamiq, "[t]oday a mainstream yacht up to 100 feet is a Med boat, but we looked at the markets with more extreme climates where together with cruising excitement the yacht should be a safe shelter for guests when needed," explains brand founder Sergei Dobroserdov. "Places like the Arabian peninsula, Asian destinations and northern Europe. This is where the yacht needs to be open and full of sea breeze during the daytime, but almost closed when evening comes and the temperature rapidly drops. At the moment, the only way to have large open or closed areas is to lengthen your yacht. But by justifying the 'IQ' at the end of the Dynamiq brand name, we had the idea of combining these areas. So the aft beach club, dining area and open-style galley with bar can be transformed within seconds using sliding doors and foldable bulwarks."

A Boat Like None Other

The GTM was designed by Netherlands based Van Oossanen Naval Architects who sought a clean shape and efficient hull that could easily do 30 knots and have an 800 nautical mile range. Klassen contributed much in the way of supercar aesthetics with exterior styling and a superstructure design reminiscent of the world's best supercars. The GTM 90 is replete with premium materials with an extravagant staircase, sundeck and 360 views. On the inside there's a generous salon, bar and fully equipped galley, sliding glass doors, and Bowers and Wilkins sound system.
